
REWARDED: HEAT OUTDOOR KITCHEN FROM OUTDOORCHEF RECEIVES RED DOT DESIGN AWARD

The Outdoorchef HEAT outdoor kitchen has been honoured with the renowned Red Dot Design Award 2025. This ultra-modern solution from the Swiss barbecue manufacturer Outdoorchef convinced the jury with its excellent design concept and its unique combination of flexibility and practicality. With the HEAT series, Outdoorchef sets new standards in the outdoor kitchen segment and proves that first-class design and maximum functionality can complement each other perfectly.

Award for outstanding design

The modular Outdoorchef HEAT outdoor kitchen impresses with its elegant, consistent design and high-quality workmanship. All modules come together to create a uniform aesthetic "as if from a single mould", which is both visually and functionally impressive. The clear design language and the focus to the details – from illuminated controls to high-quality worktops – contribute to the HEAT series setting a new benchmark in this sector. The key feature of the HEAT outdoor kitchen is its modular concept with numerous expansion options. The individual components, such as grill, sink or fridge modules, can be freely combined and extended depending on the available space and requirements. This means that the outdoor kitchen can be individually composed from a compact basic set-up to a spacious gourmet station with corner and additional modules, appealing to both beginners and BBQ professionals who value flexibility without having to compromise on design and function. "Winning the Red Dot Award confirms our approach of combining modern design with versatile functionality," says Philipp Probst, Head of Sales and Marketing at Outdoorchef. "With the HEAT outdoor kitchen, we are proud to offer a solution that meets the highest standards of aesthetics and quality while also fulfilling the individual needs of our customers."

Modular diversity combined with high suitability for everyday use

In addition to design and modularity, the HEAT outdoor kitchen impresses with its consistently high quality, functionality and suitability for everyday use. Robust, weatherproof materials such as powder-coated stainless steel and HPL ensure durability in outdoor areas. All drawers and doors are equipped with a soft-close function and offer plenty of storage space for barbecue accessories, which increases the ease of use. Illuminated operating elements enable intuitive handling even in the dark and, thanks to heavy-duty castors, the modules can be moved effortlessly despite their solid construction. This successful combination of premium materials and well thought-out functionality makes the HEAT outdoor kitchen a reliable companion for everyday outdoor cooking.

The HEAT outdoor kitchen starts at around € 6,899 (RRP) – an excellent price-performance ratio for an outdoor kitchen with premium standards. Available in specialist shops and online.
